CORSAIR-V RUSSELL WHITE

>> CORSAIR-V RUSSELL WHITE FROST

In celebration of the 20th anniversary of his World SuperBike championship, Scott requested something a little different for him to wear while teaching at the Yamaha's Champions school. He requested his iconic Headdress design on a white base, and to make it that much more interesting, Arai added a matte frost finish to the entire graphic. While everyone involved in this special request thought the finished helmets look awesome, everyone was taken by surprise at the reaction from school students and others who got a firsthand look at the custom one-off for Scott's personal use. The positive reactions and interest that continued to build over a short period of time convinced Scott and Arai that this new incarnation of his design was worthy of putting into production. Not only will Scott Russell fans have a new design to add to their collection, but riders who like white-based graphics now have a very cool option to consider.

Look for the new Russell White Frost to start landing in the US market around Mid-December.
