

BOLD ILLUMINATION

The brand new DEFIANT model, which has generated tremendous interest since it was first announced it was coming to North America, continues to pick up momentum with the arrival of new graphics this month.

The new "Character" design offers a bit of technical detail with a flash of brilliant illumination in the form of a few strategically placed reflective panels, one on each side and one at the very back. By day, they play a subtle part of the overall graphic scheme, but by night they come to life making themselves very conspicuous and hard to miss.

The attributes of the new DEFIANT model have been well received by dealers and consumers alike, all of whom report that while the style attracted the most attention, it was the appointment of details and features that deliver new benefits. The DEFIANT certainly defies the assumption that this new model is just a stylized facelift on the RX-Q model, upon which it is based. The DEFIANT is truly a new helmet in its own right, fitting much like the RX-Q, but offering improvements like enhanced ventilation and improved aerodynamics for better downforce and less lift with reduced wind noise.
